

SPORE-BORN ONSLAUGHT

Once the Tyranids establish a foothold on a planet, the digestion follows. Spores filled with corrosive enzymes rain onto the battlefield, as broodmothers spew gaunts for use on the frontlines. Biomass is recycled and reconstituted to continue the cycle as a flood of Tyranids overwhelm the battlements. Grasping monstrosities devouring any matter surge across the landscape, ravenous for the lifeblood of a once fertile world.

DETACHMENT RULE

DIGESTIVE ASSAULT

Biomass must be broken down to its simplest of forms in order to be reconstituted as the tools of the invasion.

Each time a VENOMTHROPES, TOXICRENE, HARPY, BIOVORES, TERVIGON or SPOROCYST model from your army is destroyed, before that model is removed from the battlefield but after Deadly Demise effects have been resolved, add one new SPORE MINES unit to your army and set it up wholly within 6" of that model (but not within Engagement Range of enemy units). The number of models in that SPORE MINES unit depends on the starting strength of the model that was destroyed as follows;

Number of Starting Wounds	Number of SPORE MINES models
1-4	1
5-10	2
11-16+	3

ENHANCEMENTS

If you do, that RIPPER SWARMS unit can be set up within Engagement Range of the destroyed model's unit (but not within Engagement Range of any other enemy units).

Some Tyranids variants fully develop within their progenitors.
